

2 for 1 tickets for RASE members to The Edible Garden Show

The countdown has begun to the launch of The Edible Garden Show – the first-ever national event dedicated exclusively to 'Grow Your Own' fruit and vegetables.

Organisers of The Edible Garden Show 2011 are gearing up for an unforgettable occasion that meets the phenomenal public demand for home-grown produce and healthy eating. The Edible Garden Show is supported by the Royal Agricultural Society of England – which is also a shareholder in the venture – and will debut at Stoneleigh Park, Warwickshire, over three days from 18 to 20 March 2011.

Show partners include the National Society of Allotment and Leisure Gardeners and Mirror Group Newspapers.

As a direct result of the partnership between The Edible Garden Show and the RASE, members are being given the chance to book tickets early for this great new show with a special 'Buy One Get One Free' ticket offer – saving £11. However, you need to hurry to take advantage of this fantastic opportunity as availability is limited to the first 500 applicants. For full details visit www.theediblegardenshow.co.uk

The Edible Garden Show also has the support of the Women's Institute with experts from the famous WI National Cookery School at Denman College, Abingdon, providing cookery demonstrations and offering advice to visitors on everything from preserving, jam-making and pickling to baking your own bread.

A wide range of experts and exhibitors will also conduct seminars over all three days telling you how to get the very best out of your home produce, covering all aspects of gardening, allotments, grow your own and healthy eating – as well as beekeeping, poultry, livestock and home brewing. From planting seeds to turning home-grown fruit and vegetables into delicious meals, The Edible Garden Show will be crammed full of great ideas and advice from gardening professionals.

The Edible Garden Show 2011 promises to appeal to the whole family – from the seasoned gardener who spends every spare minute on the allotment to a complete novice daunted by planting a few vegetables in the back yard.

From planting seeds to turning home-grown fruit and vegetables into delicious meals, The Edible Garden Show will be crammed full of great ideas and advice from gardening professionals. Event-goers will have access to all the essentials from seeds and organic herbs to gardening tools and sheds, from wellies to wormeries, all under one roof.
